The abstract imagery of overlapping strokes of color represents my guiding principle—meet people where they are and walk with them for a time.

This image was inspired by Remy Charlip’s poem, “Arm in Arm,” which goes like this: “Two octopuses got married and walked down the aisle arm in arm in arm in arm in arm
in arm in arm. . . .”

I love the gentle silliness of Charlip’s poem and over time, the phrase, “arm in arm” came to represent the way I like to work with people—use my strengths in conjunction with theirs and listen carefully to help them meet their needs.
